Scientist and CEO Rich Eichholz Announces Campaign For Congress in Michigan's 6th Congressional District.

Benton Harbor --- Democrat Rich Eichholz announced today his campaign for U.S. Congress in Michigan's 6th Congressional District.

"My family has a deep love of Southwest Michigan. It's the place we proudly call home. The economic climate in Southwest Michigan has been in decline for nearly three decades – ever since Fred Upton began to represent this district in Congress. In contrast to the Congressional Republicans, my experience has taught me that tax breaks for the rich at the expense of the middle class and small business owners is not the solution, but rather the cause of our weakening economy."

Eichholz is a scientist with over thirty years of business leadership experience. He is the CEO of Qmulus LLC, a company that develops and commercializes cloud-based smart technologies for charging electric vehicles. He holds degrees from the University of Illinois and Cornell University.

"We have ample untapped opportunity to grow business in our region. We can revitalize our economic climate in an environmentally-friendly way while expanding opportunities for jobs in our small town, rural area, and inner-city communities. Congress needs to focus on the issues that matter to people the most – jobs, universal healthcare, education, and fair wages. Fred Upton has not led on these priorities. I will."

Rich Eichholz is married to Linda Bowles, a microbiologist and chemist. Their son Jim resides in Indianapolis and works in sales for a payroll services company.
